There once was a rainbow caterpillar that was always bullied because he was a different color than the other caterpillars. All the other caterpillars were green and red with brown feet.

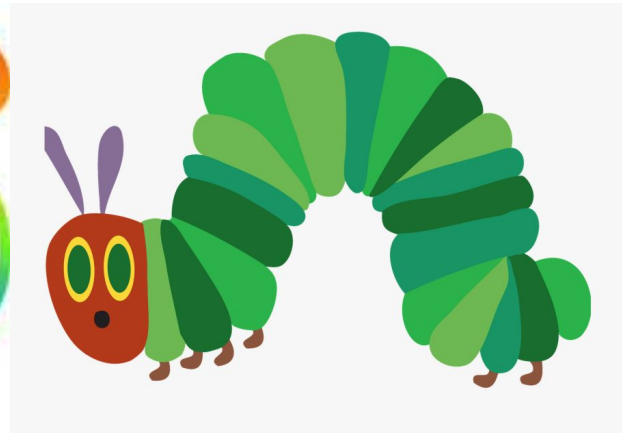

The caterpillar was bullied his whole life for being different. He was called funny names, and picked on for crawling differently. “Hey look!” “It’s the loser that can’t crawl right” said one of the caterpillars.

The caterpillar was finally done with the bullying. He tried many times to stand up to the bullies but they always brought him back down. The bullies went so far that he wanted to give up and move, until he met someone who helped him.

It was someone also like him! So they became friends and started to help others that were getting bullied too. The caterpillar started to gain popularity and never let the popularity get to him. The caterpillar started to notice that his own bullies were starting to get bullied, he helped the bullies out and they all became friends. The bullies said “We are sorry for bullying you.”
